Help celebrate the State Library of North Carolina's 200th anniversary, with historic photographs and documents.

The North Carolina Digital Collections contain over 40,000 historic and recent photographs, state government publications, manuscripts, and other resources on topics related to North Carolina. The Collections are free and full-text searchable, and bring together content from the Archives and Library of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources.

North Carolina Digital Collections

Why use Primary Sources?

Primary Sources Fascinate students because they are Personal

- Reflect on author's interpretation
- Recognize the subjective nature
- Students develop better analytical skills.

Using Primary Sources

- Students will participate in the process of history
- They will debate with teacher and classmates
- They will challenge other's conclusions
- They will seek out evidence to support their conclusions

The Classroom

- Will become an arena in which students test and apply analytical skills that will make them ready for college and the work force.

Welcome to the Treasures, an online exhibit of some of the most priceless items from the collections at the North Carolina State Archives, with supplemental materials from the State Library of North Carolina to be added later. These archival documents are not available for public viewing except at specifically designated times due to their importance to the state's history and, in some cases, their fragile condition. Also included in this online collection are some examples of presidential signatures that the State Archives has collected over time.

The Treasures began years ago as a temporary exhibit in the State Archives Search Room and, by moving this exhibit online, we hope to increase access to these materials. We hope to expand the Treasures exhibit as time allows, so check back here or browse our blog for news about new items.

OPPOSITION TO PUBLIC EDUCATION.

1. There is in this State very strong opposition to taxation for public schools, and no good can come from trying to disguise the fact, however much their friends may regret it. Very frequently we hear the statement that it is robbery to tax one man to educate another man's children. This sentiment prevails to some extent everywhere, I suppose, and those who hold it regard public education as a charity. They are, perhaps, willing to dole out a little education to the poor on the same principle that they would give them a loaf of bread to keep them from starving.

Such persons reason from other premises than those which the founders of our republic used in support of public education. The foundation of public education is broad statesmanship and not charity. The friends of the public schools

C H A P. III.

An Act to prevent the introduction and communication of contagious diseases.

WHEREAS the suffering vessels to come into any of the ports of this state, with any person or persons on board infected with any contagious disorder, or coming from any place where any such disorder prevails, would greatly endanger the health and lives of the inhabitants of this state:

I. Be it therefore enacted by the General Assembly of the state of North-Carolina, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That on the second Monday in April one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, or as soon thereafter as may be, the Commissioners of navigation in the respective ports and inlets of this state, and where there are no Commissioners, any three Justices of the Peace convenient to said ports or inlets, shall meet together and appoint such place or places as they may think proper for vessels to perform quarantine; and when a vessel shall arrive at any of the said ports or inlets having an infectious distemper on board, or which came from any place that was at the time of her sailing, or shortly before, infected with any malignant disorder, the master and pilot of the vessel shall anchor her at the place so appointed, under the penalty of five hundred pounds, to be paid by the said master or pilot, and give immediate information thereof to the Commissioners of navigation, or where there are no Commissioners, to the nearest Justice of the Peace, who with two others to be summoned by him, or any three of the Commissioners aforesaid, shall thereupon cause such vessel and her crew to be examined by at least one experienced physician, where to be had, upon whose report in writing, which said physician is required to make, and on other information they may receive, it shall and may be lawful for any three of such Commissioners, and where no Commissioners, any three neighbouring Justices, to order and command the master of the vessel, crew and passengers to perform quarantine, as by them shall be deemed most proper and requisite to check or prevent any infectious distemper from spreading in this state; and every person on board such vessel directed to perform quarantine, shall from time to time during such quarantine obey all and every order given by the authority of the said Commissioners or Justices respecting the victualling, purifying and cleansing of such vessel, and all persons and articles on board, and the intercourse of the said persons with the inhabitants of this state, the receiving any person on board or putting them on shore. And if the said pilot or master shall neglect or refuse to give such information as above required, the pilot for such neglect or refusal shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds; and the master, for the like neglect or refusal, shall forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds. And in case the master of any vessel so ordered to Commissioners of navigation, &c. to meet and appoint a place for vessels infected to perform quarantine.

Introduction

Each month the State Library of North Carolina celebrates a different topic related to North Carolina by highlighting links to online and print resources on one of the "ExploreNC" pages. These resources, suggested and vetted by library staff, come from reliable sources, including the State Library, the NC Department of Cultural Resources, other NC state government agencies, NC academic institutions, and the federal government. You'll also find suggested movies, music, and books on the right-hand sidebar of each page, as well as kid-friendly sites throughout. So, go ahead and explore North Carolina!

Introduction

October is Family History Month. The State Library of North Carolina has a long tradition of service to researchers who have undertaken the challenging and rewarding mission to trace their families' roots.

Thousands of genealogists visit our state's libraries and archives each year in search of ancestors who have lived here since its early history or who migrated from North Carolina to other states all across America.

Through our work here, we hope to showcase the wealth of resources for North Carolina genealogical research in the State Library's printed and digital collections and to present highlights of other collections throughout the state of North Carolina.

Here's what we know

- It can be slow
- The search isn't like Google
- It can be hard to page through items using the navigation pane
- The scan quality of some of the .pdfs is not the best
- Different documents are in different configurations – some view online, large items download
- Printing can be frustrating

Thanks!
